Vekic has shown remarkable positive attitude when being under huge pressure in the early stages of the second set against Pliskova. She steadily began finding rhythm dispatching some impressive backhand down the line winners. Mayr-Achleitner was quite consistent with her backhand, which tends to be her trademark shot. She was able to keep her composure after losing 2nd set to Kovinic and put some nice patches near the net, thus grabbing some crucial points. She is a competent clay courter but she has improved vastly on hard courts during the last years.

FINAL VERDICT

It is inevitably another tight match, as both seem to be pretty equal in technical elements. Vekic changed tactics when realized that she could not be heavily dependant on her forehand. The Austrian had an extra day off, though she was troubled with long rain delays. Another drama is expected as each one of them will try to avoid their opponet's baseline strenght. Mayr-Achleitner could use her experience to edge her opponent, as the Croat looked more vulnerable in long rallies.
